November 4, 1862

Yesterday at the rear of the stabling of the Eagle Hotel, some difference occurred between a young man named Moses Degraff and another person. Degrovv flourished a knife and was making threats. John Knox, a respectable citizen of Hamiltonban Twp., happened to be there and, it appears, drew a revolver for some reason or other and it was discharged, he knows not how, the load passing through the head of Degraff and causing his death in a few hours. Mr. Knox immediately gave himself to the authorities, disclaiming all intention of injury to Degraff and that the discharge of the pistol was accidental. This is the universal opinion, we believe. He went on, this morning, to York to see Judge Fisher with a view to being released on bond.
